BOLT IGNITES A LARGE BARN

Lightning Strikes Structure on King
Farm Near Gings Causing a
$1,500 Blaze.

BARN ON GORDON FARM IS HIT

Home on Ideal Stock Farm Damaged
by Strike—Hail Breaks Window Panes.

Reports of the electrical storm of yesterday afternoon which was accompanied by a steady downpour of rain, are to the effect that much damage was done. Several barns and houses were struck and one barn was destroyed by fire. The rain was accompanied by a heavy hail which was so severe that corn was torn down and window panes were broken out of many houses.

Lightning struck the large barn on the farm near Gings, where Mr. and Mrs. Will Arnold and family reside. The building was fired by the bolt and destroyed soon after the rain stopped. The structure contained a large quantity of grain, hay and other implements so that the loss, it is believed, will reach fifteen hundred dollars. There was no live stock in the barn at the time. The farm and buildings belong to Emma Gings of this city. The loss is partially covered by insurance, taken under a company which is represented by the Allen & Nipp agency. Lightning also struck the large barn on the Lewis Gordon farm in Washington township, located one mile east of Nipp's mill. The structure did not catch fire from the bolt, but it was badly damaged. The barn was so badly torn up that it will be necessary to completely overhaul it. The loss has not been estimated by the owner.

During the same storm lightning also hit the J. W. Gartin home on the Ideal Stock farm, northeast of the city. The bolt struck the chimney, but instead of entering the house, it glanced off on to the roof and tore a large hole in it. All of the members of the Gartin family were in the house at the time. They were stunned and badly frightened, but no one suffered any injuries.

East of Rushville a heavy hail accompanied the wind and rain. On the Lon Link farm where Mr. and Mrs. James Alsop reside, the hail stones were so large that they broke out window glasses in the house. At other houses the stones broke window panes and at some homes tore large holes in the screen doors, according to the report from that neighborhood. In the same vicinity, the hail tore the blades of the corn and badly damaged whole fields of the young stalks.

No damage is reported from the vicinity of Falmouth with the exception of a number of telephones being put out of commission. At Raleigh and Mays there was no damage reported to correspondents. Orange and New Salem both escaped the storm although it appeared from Rushville that the electrical display was worst in that region.

Lightning struck the house on the George Humphrey farm east of Clarksburg. Although new lightning rods had recently been placed in position on the house they were not grounded. The lightning ran down the telephone wire and burned out the phone in the house. It was also connected with the stove pipe in the kitchen and burned two large holes in the roof. Mrs. Humphrey was standing within a few feet of the cook stove when lightning struck, but she escaped injury. Nearly all the telephones in the Clarksburg neighborhood were rendered useless by the storm, and the entire section experienced a heavy rain. Farmers say that the storm of yesterday appeared to be the most dangerous one of the many which have invaded Rush county in the last ten days. They give as their reason for that the fact that the lightning seemed to be very low while in other instances it has seemed high in the air, and when it struck, little damage was done.

M'ALLISTER IS CHIEF OF POLICE

Mayor Black Names Policeman to Fill Place of Jesse Harlow
Who Resigned.

JOHN WOLTERS IS ASSISTANT

Thomas C. McAllister was appointed chief of police today by Mayor B. A. Black to fill the place made vacant by the resignation of Jesse Harlow. The appointment of Mr. McAllister ends the fight for the position and came as no great surprise as many had picked him for the place. Mr. McAllister should make a good chief. He has been a policeman on the local force for the past three or four months and has proved to be a very capable officer. Policeman Wolters has been named as assistant chief. The third man on the force has not been named but it is thought the mayor will do so in a few days.

Jesse Harlow, the retiring chief resigned on his own accord and it was with regret that the mayor and the public saw him go. He has made an efficient officer and worked untiringly to fulfil his duties.

FAIR LITTLE OVER ONE MONTH AWAY

Directors Will Meet in Few Days to Perfect Further Arrangements
For Big Event.

CAMPAIGN OF ADVERTISING

The directors of the Rush County Fair Association will meet in two or three weeks to make further arrangements for the annual event which will be held August 22-25. The farmers are so busy at present that little time can be spared for the fair, but by two weeks it is expected there will be a meeting.

Advertising for the fair has not been started. It is planned to begin the advertising campaign about one month in advance of the fair for in this way the people will not lose interest as they would if the campaign was started now. Post cards have been placed in the hands of the merchants bearing the date and with instructions that they write their friends. This is the only advertising so far. Secretary King states that most of the special privileges, such as score card, check-room and others have already been sold.

Hinshaw Grand Opera Company's
Concerts Will Delight as no
Number Ever Did.

TO APPEAR AT CHAUTAUQUA

Press Comments Are to Effect That Company is Best Wherever it Appears.

There have been a number of pleasing numbers on the chautauqua programs in years past, but none have ever delighted audiences as it is expected the Hinshaw grand opera company will at this year's assembly, which will be held August 6 to 13. That company of artists will be here Thursday when an afternoon and night concert will be given. The "American" of Nashville, Tenn., says of the organization:

The Hinshaw Opera company appeared at Ryman Auditorium last night, giving the eleventh number in the Nashville Spring Music Festival program, and was greeted by an audience of fully 2,000 persons, composed of the most cultured people of Nashville and this section.

The company deserves the splendid ovation given it last night, as each member of the quartet is a star.

William Warde Hinshaw, bass-baritone, is a grand opera star of the first magnitude, and he shone with a particular brilliancy last night in some of the finest selections from the masters.

Mrs. Ila Burnet Hinshaw has a voice of exquisite sweetness, clear as a bell and pure and true to every test put upon it in the difficulties of the program last evening.

After her beautiful rendition of the Strauss "Frühlingstimmen," the audience would not be quieted, and, appearing again Mrs. Hinshaw sang "The Last Rose of Summer" to the great delight of her hearers. Never have the lovely words of Tom Moore's poem rung with a more exquisite sweetness, and the vast Auditorium was filled to the rafters with the beautiful melody of the loved old air as it came from the bird-like throat of the singer.

Edward C. Towne, tenor, has a rare voice, full of sweetness and power. He gave "Romana" (from La Gioconda) to the entire satisfaction of the most critical of his hearers. Continued on page 4.

FARM LABORER IS PROSTRATED

Charles McFeely is Overcome With Heat While Pitching Wheat on Carr Farm.

THOUGHT HE WILL RECOVER

The first heat prostration of the year was that reported at the Owen L. Carr farm west of Arlington Thursday. Charles McFeely, a farm laborer, was overcome while pitching wheat from the shock on wagons and fell over in the field. He was carried to the house and found to be in a critical condition. It was some time before he regained consciousness and was able to sit up. He will be compelled to rest for a few days before returning to the field. This is the first laborer who has been reported to have suffered from the effects of the heat during the period of high temperature.

Rushville Can Compel Company to Build New Depot if Proper Steps are Taken.

LETTER WRITER'S PART IN IT

Railroad Was Ordered by Railway Commission to Erect One Four Years Ago—Facts Recalled.

It seems only a matter of a short time before Rushville will have a new C. H. & D. station if the proper officials will act in the right manner, according to local attorneys, who have been in touch with the case since its beginning. All that needs to be done in the enforcement of an order pending in the State Railroad commissioners' court against the company, which condemned the building, the ground and commanded that a new station be built. According to local attorneys, if the city attorney pushes the matter in the proper direction, the railway company will be compelled to erect a modern and sanitary station.

It will be remembered that an article appeared in the Daily Republican yesterday in which the plan was suggested by an anonymous letter writer for obtaining a new C. H. & D. station here. The writer pointed out that stations were ordered by the railway commission in other cities and that there was no reason why such a thing could not be done here. She cited an example. The same writer attempted to arouse the Rushville Retail Merchants Association by mailing the secretary a similar letter last evening in which she cited another example in the State and pointed out what might be done.

It develops that the anonymous letter writer has accomplished something. The publication of her letter has recalled to local attorneys that there is now an order pending in the railway commissioners' court by which the railroad can be forced to build at once. It will not be necessary to go through the primary steps as they have already been taken in this case.

About four years ago the railroad commission was petitioned by the city administration through George Young, city attorney, to condemn the present station and site and order a new one built. The matter was taken up by the commission and the members of that body came here and held court. The evidence was taken in the mayor's court during Mayor H. M. Cowing's administration. George Young represented the city and John B. Elam was attorney for the railroad.

The members of the commission visited the C. H. & D. station and all of the other railway stations in the city. It was pointed out by evidence in the hearing that the station was unsafe and that the location was unlawful, because there is a statute, according to local attorneys, which provides that a railway station shall not be located at the intersection of two railroads. Testimony was introduced to show that two engines collided at the intersection of the roads and one fell over on the station, partially destroying it and endangering the lives of people in the building at the time.

Later the commission returned a decision in which the present site and building was condemned and the company ordered to erect a new station. At that time the company was in the hands of the receiver and the order was never enforced.

Now it is said, since the company is out of the hands of the receiver, the commission will enforce the order, if their attention is called to it by the local city attorney. By an act of the last legislature the railroad commission was given the power to enforce its own orders if they are not obeyed. Previous to that time it was necessary to go to court to mandate the offending corporations.

Mr. Young says that the commission's order was to the effect that a modern and sanitary American-plan station should be built here. That calls for two waiting rooms, two toilet rooms and all other modern conveniences. According to attorneys, it will be necessary to choose a new site as the present one is condemned. It was said today that the company already has plans drawn for a new station and that it is only waiting until it is forced to erect a new station on another site.

MANY INSURANCE ADJUSTERS HERE

Damage by Recent Storms in This County Necessitate Sending of Men by Companies.

SETTLE LOSS WITH FARMERS

Rush county has probably more insurance adjusters within her borders in the last week or ten days than any other time in the history of the county. The county has literally been flooded with men from the main offices of almost every known insurance company. The men were sent here to adjust the losses caused by the many storms passing over the county. The first big storm was one week ago last Tuesday and as a large amount of damage was done, the insurance companies in which the farmer was insured were required to send a man here to settle. Since this time there has been several storms and each storm causing a loss necessitating the sending of adjusters by the different companies. In some cases the local agents adjusted the claims but a majority were settled by the adjusters.

SAY SQUIRRELS ARE SCARCE

Farmers Advance Theory That the Snakes Are Killing Them.

Farmers and sportsmen report an unaccountable scarcity of squirrels here and in nearby counties. In the favored resorts of the squirrel, experienced hunters say they are unable to find even one in a day's search and the gray squirrel, once numerous here, seems to be well nigh extinct. Some of the farmers have a theory that snakes are the cause of the squirrel shortage. They say the common black snake and the garter or grass snake, are more numerous than a few years ago.

POPULATION IS SOARING

Found That Six Families Are Moving to This City.

Rushville's population is being boosted daily and, according to John Gantner, who is gathering data for the Jacksonian city directory, the number in the city and suburbs will not exceed six thousand. Today it was discovered that six different families were moving into Rushville, which added sixteen more people to the list which has already been gathered. New babies, too, have materially assisted in making the total larger.

Fair weather except probably local thunder showers tonight or Sunday. Not much change in temperature.

TO ATTEND IN LARGE CROWDS

Rush County People Will Flock to Indianapolis Next Week For Initial Grand Circuit Meet.

HORRIE BROOKS WILL START

John D., Sensational Pacer, is Twice
Entered—Harrie Jones May Race at Kalamazoo.

Rush county trainers will not be very well represented at the opening of the Grand Circuit in Indianapolis next week. John D., 2:19 1/4, owned by James Tate, Jr., of Connersville, and in the stable of Horrie Brooks, is the only local horse which appears in the list of entries which was announced today.

John D. is entered in the 2:18 pacing class on Tuesday and the 2:54 pacing class on Wednesday. Much is expected of John D. as he has shown phenomenal speed in workouts at Riverside park, where he has been trained by Brooks this season. He went a very sensational mile about two weeks ago, negotiating the distance in much better time than was expected of him. Horrie Brooks has been racing at Canton, Ohio, this week, but John D. was left here and given easy workouts. He will be started for the first time in the Indianapolis events.

Harrie Jones, who has been training at Riverside park this season, the largest stable ever collected together at one time in Rush county, will not start the season before the week of July 17, or possibly later than that. He has several promising candidates for track honors, but he has made no entries in the opening Grand Circuit meet and will not race there.

Mr. Jones said today that he felt his stable was not quite in condition for the initial performance of the season. He does not care to stake his horses against some of the product that will be raced at the Indianapolis meeting. Many of the entries are western and southern horses who, on account of the weather conditions, have had the advantage of many more weeks of training and are in better condition than most horses trained in the middle west. He may start at Kalamazoo, Michigan the week of July 17, which is the second Grand Circuit meeting of the season. It may be possible that he will wait until the next week when the meeting will be held at Grand Rapids, Mich.

Rush county admirers of fast horse flesh, of which there are many, are looking forward to the coming meet, the initial one of the Grand Circuit. It is the first time for many years that Grand Circuit racing has been held in Indianapolis. Due to this fact many Rush county horsemen, and others who know nothing about horses, will take advantage of the opportunity to see good horse racing, when it is so near home. It is predicted that the traffic to Indianapolis next week will be almost as heavy as it is during State fair week.

FLIPS FINGER OUT OF JOINT.

Dr. E. D. Jewett met with a peculiar accident in St. Paul yesterday. He was walking along the street and stepped up behind a friend intending to "thump" him on the neck by placing his second finger against his thumb and flipping it. In making the "flip" his finger was unjointed.

MERCURY SOARS AGAIN.

Despite the fact that cool breezes followed the storm last evening, the mercury hovered around ninety-seven most of the day. Late this afternoon it dropped back to ninety-four.

SHOULD NOT BE USED IN PUBLIC

Tobacco and Liquor Users Should Hide Away.

THIS IS DR. WILEY'S OPINION

In Discussing Organization of the Anti-Smoking Crusade, Dr. Wiley Says That In Fifteen Years Smokers and Drinkers Will Keep Hidden.

Washington, July 8.—Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, chief of the bureau of chemistry of the agricultural department, who is one of the incorporators of the Non-Smokers Protective League, of America, talked freely about the plans and purposes of the organization. He conceded the right of anyone to drink, smoke, chew or dip snuff in the privacy of his own home, but made the same startling prediction that within fifteen years there would be nothing of the sort done in public.

The pure food expert called attention to the fact that even now "college students, a brand of animal that is not noted for daintiness or regard for the feelings of others, will crawl beneath a grandstand to take a pull from the bottle that curses." In fifteen years it is the doctor's idea, that any man who wants to smoke will have to make a concession to public sentiment by crawling into a hole, or retiring to his own home.

"A man," said the doctor today, "has a perfect right to drink, chew or dip snuff in his sanctuary, but he has not the shadow of right to inflict unwholesome smoke and his vile breath on the community at large. There should be a law strictly enforced by the authorities, prohibiting smoking and chewing in public places, or on cars where other persons, non-smokers, are obliged to be."

Then the expert branched out and, speaking medically, made the statement that "no person could suffer from sunstroke who had not been a smoker or boozier."

This, the doctor thought, was proved by the fact that farmers suffered but little from the heat, although they were out in the sun all the time. "But," he said, "take a man whose system is full of nicotine or alcohol, and the moment the sun's rays hit him good, he simply crumples up, and sometimes gives up the ghost."

She Had a Vision.

Asbury Park, N. J., July 8.—Because she said she had a vision to pray at the funeral of her eight-year-old son who was killed at Bradley Beach by a kick from a horse, Mrs. Charles Wegerman stood beside the coffin and gave vent to a fervent appeal for the safety of her other five children and her husband. She spoke of the vision and said she was told to stand beside the coffin and make the prayer.

Dublin, July 8.—King George V., and Queen Mary, on board of the royal yacht, arrived at Kingstown last evening. They were accompanied by the Duke of Connaught. The yacht anchored for the night, and the members of the royal party remained aboard. They landed this morning.

Everyone can use the Brush

It's low enough in price to be within the reach of everyone

It's adaptable enough to be of use to anyone

That's why it's Everyman's Car

THE Brush Runabout is the embodiment of an original idea—no other car just like it.

It's not a miniature big car, with big car complexity, without big car stability.

It's designed especially to serve a certain end—to provide an adaptable, dependable, economical car that anyone can drive, everyone can use and no one, who depends on quick, economical transportation can afford to be without.

*The Brush
for women*

SIMPLICITY appeals especially to the woman. Fear of mechanical trouble is a bugbear. She often lacks the strength to crank a big car and the agility to steer it and shift levers in crowded traffic. She can handle the Brush with ease. She never worries about its mechanism. She can control it readily. She can give herself up to the delights of the road.

What better proof could be offered than the famous Abernathy boy's trip, from New York to Oklahoma after meeting Roosevelt. Nine-year-old Louie drove the car after only three lessons, and six-year-old Temple often cranked it. They never had a bit of trouble.

Your boys—or your wife—can drive it as easily. It would mean health and pleasure for them. And it's a smart-looking little car, too.

Salesmen find it is invaluable

TIME SAVING is the basic economy on which all commercial progress is founded.

The Brush is quicker than horses or trolley—more elastic than trains—since it doesn't have to follow steel rails.

It reduces waste by saving time for anyone compelled to go quickly and frequently from place to place—especially for the salesman.

It means increased sales and more money to employer and employee—and costs less than livery charges or stabling a horse. One salesman paid for his car out of this saving. And it's a pleasure after business hours.

Everyman's Car $450

The Brush Runabout

DEPENDABLE means of getting about is essential to the physician—to doctors their automobile is a godsend.

No class of buyers is more discriminating in choosing a car. The doctor can't afford time lost in repairs—can't risk accidents on the road. That's why the simplicity of the Brush solves his problem. It don't break down. It's always ready for work, never tires or goes lame.

It appeals to doctors in its thorough dependability

Then, too, it's economical—which is important when one travels far. Hardly a cent a mile for operation. Saves at both ends—makes possible greater earnings, recreation and better work.

QUICK COMMUNICATION is essential in many lines of business—between changing points—no time to string telephone wires.

Then, too, you can't see over the telephone.

The contractor oversees a dozen jobs—or the architect, master mechanic, or foreman. The Brush is indispensable to get about quickly.

*The contractor uses
it constantly*

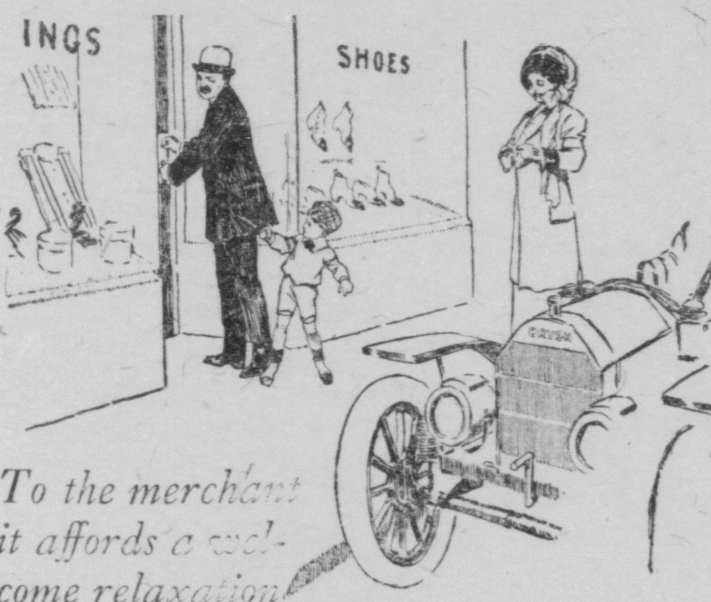

It's just as helpful to the salesman, collector, distributor, solicitor or district manager.

And contractors do get jobs in the queerest, out-of-the-way places. Get there pleasantly.

Its primary strength is its simplicity—easy to handle—free from mechanical difficulty.

Its secondary strength is its dependability—proved in the hands of users by remarkable service in scores of businesses.

And finally, its low cost of operation and maintenance, together with low initial cost, make it possible for anyone to own it. Hundreds use it because it's cheaper than a horse and buggy.

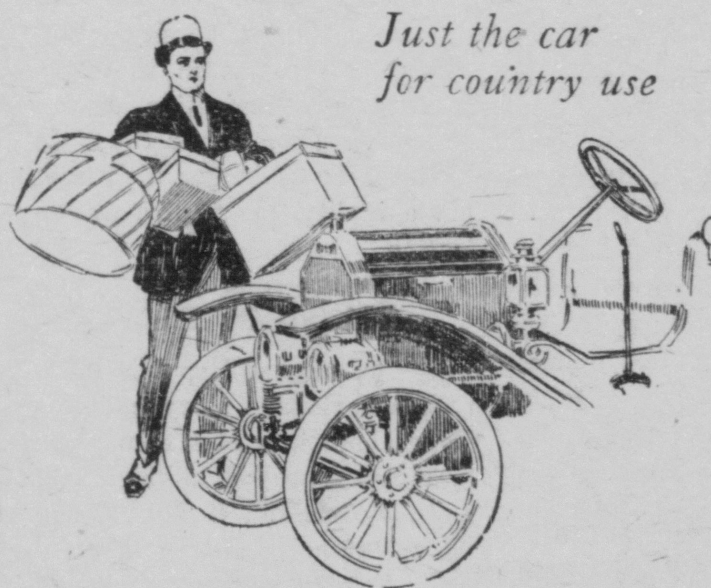

*To the merchant
it affords a well-
come relaxation*

NO CROWDED CARS—what relief to avoid the crush in going home—tired, bothered by petty worries, temper ruffled by the jam—what a humor for the home-coming! Your wife can stop for you at the store. You can hear the youngster's happy shout an hour earlier at the thought of a bully ride.

Ruddy cheeks and bright eyes come from out-of-doors. You're buying health for them and for yourself when you buy the Brush.

It might come in handy to close a sale or get a bargain or make a delivery—if needs be.

*Just the car
for country use*

STOP COMMUTING—often wished you could? If city rents were not so high, you would, perhaps—

When it came to the real test you'd balk at giving up your bully country place—it's worth the trouble of catching trains.

You can avoid the trouble. The Brush will bring you in—and more cheaply—won't cost you two cents a mile.

You don't have to wait for trains and it's pleasant going back and forth.

Handy for the bundles when your wife's shopping—and for a spin at night or a Sunday visit.

HANDY and pleasant for the young folks, when you don't use it.

Let the youngsters drive to the country club for tennis or golf. You may want to play yourself and it's beastly to carry clubs when you don't need to.

Handiest little car that's made for that sort of thing—and will save you a lot of money if you own a big car.

Twelve to twenty cents a mile's a lot to pay for station work. Some big cars will cost you more.

folks find it a delight*

ECONOMY—there isn't any car in the world that's in it with the Brush for economy. That's easily demonstrated. The Rural Free Delivery service pays small salaries to carriers and horses eat a good share of the pay.

But the R. F. D. finds the Brush will beat the horse hollow when it comes to a low cost. Here's one example—and there are plenty others:

Fred Ingersoll, a rural free delivery man of Pasadena, Cal., has a Brush car which has been run over two years. It has traveled 25,000 miles, stopped and started 118,000 times, and the engine has turned over 4,000 hours. Still in first-class condition and giving perfect service. Cost less than $300. Can any horse do as much—or cost so little?

THAT'S REAL ECONOMY PROOF

test of economy*

Outrageous "Jokes."

It is difficult for the reasonable mind to understand the alleged sense of humor that seeks amusement in hazing newly wedded couples. No doubt the participants think that any person who cannot see the hilarious humor of the practice is an "old fogey," but let them take it to themselves and ask themselves how they would like to be made the victims of similar "jokes." The world is full of persons who as the popular saying is, "can make a joke but cannot take one" and it is too true that those who are the most given to idiotic practical "jokes" on others are the first to lose their tempers if any such joke is attempted upon them.

Of all the "jokes" of this kind that of annoying newly wedded couples is the most persistent. A few days ago a party of "jokers" was more or less punctured with buckshot by an indignant Jersey bridegroom, according to press reports, and the general verdict was that the offenders richly deserved what they got. The case reported from Pittsburg of a bride and bridegroom being attacked twice on the same evening by a party of "friends," resulting in one of the victims fainting during the process and now lying in a critical condition.

The trouble seems to be in the germ of the mob spirit. As soon as half a dozen or a dozen persons in jovial mood assembly they not infrequently seem to lose all control of their individual selves and become mere members of a mob, with all the recklessness and abandon that usually characterize such assemblages. The comparatively harmless joke is carried too far, developing into boisterous horseplay and ultimately into disturbance of the peace. Editions of this kind should be slurred by all reasonable and respectable persons. The "charivari" is an outrageous invasion of private rights and should not be tolerated by law or public opinion.

The Oshkosh Northwestern, a LaFollette organ, says that in all probability the Wisconsin senator will delay his active candidacy for president until 1916 inasmuch as the re-nomination of Taft seems a certainty now. Then, continues the Northwestern Taft will in all probability be defeated which will clear the atmosphere and open the way for the nomination of a radical like LaFollette. This is a very pleasing program no doubt to the radicals and it is not at all unlikely that LaFollette has something like this in mind as his ambition knows no bounds. It may also be in his mind to assist in the predicted defeat of Taft by sulking in his tent, open opposition to the Republican nominee or by a half-hearted support such as Bryan gave Parker which would be the worst of all. In that case Mr. LaFollette's chances in 1916 would be even less than they are now.

It is to be wondered just who would please the Richmond Paladium, the sister of the Indianapolis Sun. Will it be a LaFollette or a Cummins? Or would James Bennett Gordon be to its liking? Probably he. That paper takes occasion to point out that William Howard Taft falls far short of being good presidential timber. Surely there must be some great mind soaring about the editorial sanctum which is a near approach to infallibility. That's the opinion after perusing the columns of the editorial page.

Dr. J. N. Hurty, secretary of the state board of health, has written a circular letter to physicians over the state urging that they make use of the state tuberculosis hospital at Rockville. The hospital was opened April 1, and only a few patients have been registered, it is reported, to the board. Dr. Hurty holds the reason more persons are not seeking admission is because they do not know of the existence of the hospital, or do not understand its purpose.

It is said that Katherine Elkins may finally marry "Billy Hitt" of Washington. If she wants some one capable of earning money enough to buy her spring hats, she can do better than marry any Italian nobleman.

It is fortunate that the national capital is located in some good hot place like Washington. Were it on the cool Maine coast, you could never get Congress to quit talking and go home.

Representative Broussard of New Orleans wants $250,000 appropriated for importing African wild animals. As most people can't look at Teddy's stuffed lions without trembling, they don't care to have the live critters around.

The smugglers paid nearly $3,000,000 in fines and forfeitures to the New York custom house the past year. Uncle Sam gets a handsome income out of the wickedness of his children.

Most people make an awful fuss when the thermometer gets up to 100, but you never heard a farmer's wife complain even though it was 130 in her kitchen.

These are critical days for the cereal crops, but we notice that Uncle Sam usually makes his bread in his own kitchen and rarely has to patronize the European bake carts.

That head on locomotive collision at Indianapolis must have reminded Mr. Taft of what happens when an Insurgent meets a Stand Patter.

It is claimed that the lamb is no longer fooled by Wall street, but the heap of filmy rainbows advertised in many of the financial columns make us think differently.

San Francisco has had another earthquake, but the warning was evidently fruitless, as church attendance was reported no larger.

There is a controversy over the job of catering for Congress. We move that they be given no pie on days when they do nothing.

EDITORIALETTES.

That is to say, rain has ceased to serve as a Red Cross for sufferers with the heat.

Howdy Mac! Here's success to you.

The poor town clock was in an awful uproar today because John Innis persisted in mixing his feet up with its hands. It spoiled the day for a lot of people. But the clock had its face painted anyway. You wouldn't hardly know it now.

We used to think the big thermometer outside the drug store indicated interest in scientific meteorology. Now we suspect it is a part of the scientific management of the soda fountain.

Free ice would be more helpful than free wool just at present.

Decline in the marriage rate is sometimes attributed to the mental superiority of women, but any young man who walks boldly up to the soda fountain can have most anything he wants for the next two months.

Once more this season recalls the sad fact that threshing dinners are no more.

Unsettled weather is even more annoying than unsettled bills, but few of us turn down the alley to keep from meeting the weather bureau.

Don't overlook a good bet on swatting a fly and hope with us that the court house clock will get right with the world once more.

What Our Neighbors Are Talking About

HAVE BOTH NECESSITIES.

(Morristown Sun.)

Two things are instrumental in advertising a town. Morristown has both. One is a band. The other is a commercial club. Our merchants' commercial organization is fully organized and is prepared to talk factory, town improvements or any old thing to push things along. This organization is a necessity. We have existed without it in the past, but since its organization a decided change has come over the town and business is no longer a dream here, but a reality. Long live this organization.

SAVED BY PRAYER.

(Columbus Republican.)

A remarkable story comes from Hope about how Mrs. Ben Essex of that town, prayed all night for the recovery of Mrs. George Kemp, and the resultant recovery of the later. According to the story Mrs. Kemp was critically ill and all hope for her recovery was abandoned. She had made all her funeral arrangements, selected the Rev. W. D. Clark to preach the funeral and asked that she might be allowed to die in peace. Mrs. Essex came and sat by the bed throughout the night. She prayed without ceasing that Mrs. Kemp might recover. When morning came Mrs. Kemp was much stronger. She asked for a drink and then for buttermilk. A little later she complained that she was hungry, and asked for food. Since that time she has been growing steadily better so her friends say.

EXPECTED TO BE IDEAL PROGRAM

Mrs. Rose Lutiger Gammon, as contralto, did some splendid work, singing with an ease and naturalness that add to the charm of her rich full, contralto voice.

Nashville has had the pleasure of hearing a number of famous pianists during the past season or two, but Edgar A. Nelson, the accompanist of last evening, has seldom been equalled for technique of touch and tone work. He gave but one solo, the Liszt Sixth Hungarian Rhapsodie, which he interpreted in seemingly flawless style every note of the difficult composition ringing with a remarkable clearness.

The group by Mr. Hinshaw included two selections sung here last week by Mr. Gogorza, singing with Mme. Eames—"Mother O' Mine" (Tours), and the Figaro Song from the Barber of Seville. Nashville bowed its acknowledgements to the latter artist, but it must be admitted that Mr. Hinshaw's voice suffered nothing by the comparison.

It is safe to say that in all the realm of music the singers could not have found numbers more pleasing as encores than "Then You'll Remember Me," and "The Last Rose of Summer," given by Mr. Towne and Mrs. Hinshaw. There were many in the audience who had not heard the old favorites well rendered for many years and somehow they seemed to fill a long felt want in the program.

SWAT THE "SKEETER."

A pamphlet has just been issued on swatting the "skeeter." A few drops of the following mixture on a towel hung over the head of the bed is a warning that keeps the little drillers at a distance while the sleeper rests in dreamland: Oil of citronella 1 oz.; spirits of camphor, 1 oz., and oil of cedar, 1/2 oz.

LIGHTNING KILLS COLT.

Lightning killed a valuable colt belonging to Walter Reddeman near Homer Thursday afternoon between four and five o'clock. The colt was one year old and gave promise of becoming a fine driving horse. It was in the field when struck and was not near a tree or wire fence.

AMUSEMENTS

The Palace will show the same program tonight which includes a Lubin and an Essanay, both high class films.

The Vaudet will offer two reels of pictures for its Saturday night patrons. "Mollie Pitcher," a Champion drama, is a war story of great realistic worth and pathos. Thrilling war scenes are reproduced and a novel love story is interwoven with the plot. The Biograph, "Child of the Ghetto" is a drama of much worth, which depicts a story of intrinsic worth. The illustrated song will be "A Wreck on the Tide of Time."

The Portola theater would not accommodate the people who attempted to gain entrance to see "Faust," which was shown in two reels the last night. The films are beautifully hand colored and proved to be very pleasing to the many audiences. The special Faust music is played during the program. The special music consists of solos and duets by Leon Maxey and Charles VanCamp. The same program will be rendered this evening.

I formulated my own plans for the evening. In my then state of mind, I did not care to exert myself, prefer-ing to go where I could sit quietly and be entertained by others. I decided upon the theater. A block further on I happened across a banking acquaintance, who, upon my invitation, joined me. At the end of the performance we emerged. It was now in the neighborhood of 11 o'clock, and, shaking hands, we parted for the night.

Having thrown down my key to the house, I decided to stay downtown until morning. Crossing the street, I entered the Pacific hotel. I knew the clerk at the desk, and saluting him by name, I asked him to assign me to a room a few floors up and fronting on the alley, such a location being quieter in the early morning hours than a room facing the street. He gave me the key and a bell boy immediately showed me to my number.

Not being accustomed to retiring before 12, I was not in the least sleepy. Leaving the light burning, I threw myself upon the bed as scene by scene I ran the film of the events of the day before my mental eyes. And so deeply did I become engrossed in this that when I awoke myself and looked at my watch it was after midnight. I arose and stood before the mirror, searching my own face keenly, my mind still reverting to my quarrel with my uncle and its probable future consequences. While I did not imagine that in his present state of mind he would be particularly concerned as to where I was, I resolved to call him up and advise him of my whereabouts. It did not seem that it could do any harm, and undoubtedly it was good policy to try and conciliate him now that we had given full vent to our spleen. Going to the wall telephone, I asked for his number, and a moment later heard his querulous voice over the wire as he demanded to know who it was that called him at that hour. I answered him with the quietness I always strove to employ except upon rare occasions when I for the moment lost command of myself. I wished him well and told him where I was and that I had decided to remain downtown for the night. His answering sentences exploded in my ear like distant firecrackers.

"That's right. Just like you. Spending your money for hotel bills when you have a better bed at home. And I suppose you will pay those pirates a dollar for your breakfast. All right, go ahead, young millionaire. But I will charge you for your breakfast here, anyway. Don't you forget that."

"I will be home at nine o'clock, the usual Sunday breakfast hour," I returned in an untroubled tone. He snorted and rang off without deigning to reply further, and I hung up the receiver with the feeling that I had done my part towards a reconciliation. For the present at least, the matter must rest where it was. Then calling up the hotel office and leaving an order for them to awaken me at seven o'clock, I locked the door and turned out the light.

At the ringing of the call bell the next morning at the hour I had designated, I arose and began my toilet. I had slept but little, and that little was more like the semi-consciousness which comes from exhaustion rather than the slumber of repose. I felt unrefreshed, despondent, self-angry. Nor was my appearance in the glass satisfactory as I ran my eyes over my reflection. I had little desire for breakfast, but inasmuch as I had told Uncle Abner that I would be present at that occasion, I paid my bill and took a car homeward. The morning was a midsummer dream. The foliage had been bathed by a night shower and the air was perfumed with the incense of growing green things. As I passed up the walk among the oaks I could not but realize how beautiful the grounds were despite their unkemptness, and that it would cost me a pang after all to leave this place permanently should my quarrel with its owner develop to that acute stage. For it was under these trees that I had passed so many pleasant hours with Clare, or wandering through the marble halls of my ancestral, Mrs. Tebbets admitted me upon my summons; but no sooner did I enter the sleepy halls than my fondness for the place vanished in the old depression which always came upon me as I viewed their loneliness. It was like passing into a vault, cheerless, gloomy, the echoes mocking my footsteps. I went straight to my own room. The door was closed between where I was and my uncle's apartment, and I stood listening. Usually he was up and could be heard putting around before this, but now all was silence beyond. I opened the door that separated our quarters and stepped forward. But on the threshold I stopped with my eyes sweeping the scene that lay before me.

The room was in a state of disorder. Everywhere was to be seen the hand of violence. Bureaudrawers had been ransacked and left yawning; the bed was a twisted tangle of sheets and crumpled pillows; clothing was scattered about the floor. But what was more startling than anything else was the condition of the iron safe. Its combination had been shattered by some powerful explosive and its door, standing wide, gave a full view into its looted interior. With the sweat starting from my forehead I rushed forward.

I inspected it with a glance. No money remained in it, but the papers looked as though they had not been disturbed beyond a general overhauling. I swept my eyes about the room and under the bed. No glimpse of my uncle rewarded me and I ran from the room with loud calls for Mrs. Tebbets. It was her custom not to disturb us of Sunday mornings until she announced breakfast, and that she knew nothing of the condition of affairs in the upper part of the house had been evidenced by her ordinary demeanor as she admitted me. From room to room of the upper story I went in rapid search of the missing one, and at last, in one of the dark closets I found him and dragged him forth. He was bound hand and foot, and I bent over him and shook him. He seemed to be rather more unconscious than otherwise, but he certainly was alive.

Puffing up the stairs in response to my cries, Mrs. Tebbets reached me just as I had finished my hasty diagnosis. I immediately removed a handkerchief which had been tied around his mouth, slashed the cords which bound him, and together we carried him to my room and placed him upon the bed. I tore open his night garment and examined him superficially, but could discover no marks of physical violence save about the throat. There it was red and puffy. Mrs. Tebbets, in a hysteria of excitement, was useless as an assistant, and hastening to the telephone I called up first Doctor Courtney, our family physician, and then the nearest police station. After that I went back to the victim.

He was breathing more freely now that the handkerchief had been removed, and presently his eyes opened and he stared at me. When I spoke to him, however, he did not answer. Having done everything for him that I could think of for the moment, I sat down upon the edge of the bed to await the arrival of those whom I had summoned.

CHAPTER III.

Doctor Courtney arrived first. Up the drive he came whirling in his light electric runabout, and darting through the door which the housekeeper held wide for him, was by the patient's side in a few seconds. Together we made a thorough examination of the reviving man. The physician tested his temperature, his heart and reflexes, afterward addressing me concisely.

"It is nothing serious. There is no permanent injury and he will be all right as soon as he recovers from the shock. He seems to have been severely choked, but there was no chloroform or other drug administered." He gave the patient a stimulant, and I was much relieved to see my uncle respond to it favorably as the patrol wagon arrived. A moment later a group of officers piloted by Mrs. Tebbets swarmed into the room. In a few words, I explained to them the condition of affairs as I had found them, and in twos and threes they went trooping over the house from top to bottom in a survey of the safe, the doors and shutters and other things of interest to them. Then they came back to us. Uncle Abner by this time was able to speak in a low voice, and the captain, seating himself, demanded that he be told all that the pilfered one knew of the affair. Still speaking with more or less difficulty, Uncle Abner addressed us.

"I was sound asleep. The room was very dark and I knew of nothing unusual until I awoke and found myself pinned to the bed by a heavy man. He was choking me and pressing my arms to helplessness beneath his knees. I attempted to struggle, but could do little more than squirm beneath his strength. He used a good deal of force, and in a few moments my senses left me. I knew nothing more until I awoke and found myself in some dark hole. I rolled about a little, and from the closeness of the walls to each other knew it was a closet. There was a handkerchief in my mouth and I could not call for help. Anyway it would have been useless, for there was nobody else on the premises but Mrs. Tebbets, and I knew if she should awake and attempt to come to my assistance or give the alarm my assailants would do something to render her helpless if they had not already done so. Therefore I desisted attempting to make a noise. After awhile I must have lost my senses again, for all is blank to me from them up to the time I awoke here a few moments ago. I do not believe that more than one man had hold of me, as I heard nothing to indicate that he had companions. He may have had, however, for I could see nothing in the darkness. I do not believe that I am hurt very much, but I am considerably exhausted and feel pretty well battered up. He used me pretty rough, and I thought he was going to kill me. I am rather old and not very strong, you know, and cannot stand as much as I could once upon a time. I could not identify the man if I saw him by daylight, but I heard him cough in a peculiar way as he was choking me."

He stopped speaking and the ghost of his old foxlike smile came creeping out of the corners of his mouth. "But I will bet he did not get much, the infernal villain. Everything of value was locked up in the old strong box. You may be sure I took good care to that."

We at the bedside shot significant glances from one to another in the silence. I disliked to break the news of his loss to him, not knowing what kind of a scene he would make, but decided I might as well do so now as at any other time. "They got whatever money was in the safe, uncle," I said. "They blew the combination into old junk and cleaned out the currency to the last cent." He uttered a gasp and tried to sit up, but the physician pushed him back upon the pillow.

"Burglarized the safe! Got all the money!" he yelled, hoarsely, his eyes rolling upward so that the whites were to be seen. The expression upon his face was a ghastly reflection of the shock to his soul, and despite his miserliness I felt sorry for him as I grasped one twitching hand. His cheeks turned to the yellowish white of a fish's belly as he straightened out to his full length with a groan that was horrifying in its death mimicry.

"My God! My God! Forty thousand dollars of money that I toiled and schemed and saved for gone into the pockets of loafing thieves. And I was going to put it in the bank the first thing Monday morning. Oh, it's terrible—terrible." He fell to rolling his head and cracking the joints of his fingers in his mental agony as the officers looked down upon him in mingled pity and contempt. Presently he recovered himself with a start and demanded to know about his papers; and this time I was glad to be able to tell him that so far as I had observed in my hasty scrutiny, nothing had been taken but the money. He seemed a trifle relieved for the moment at this information, but soon fell back into his lamentings. It was one of the most lamentable sights that I ever looked upon, exhibiting as it did all that was deplorable in his nature. The captain cleared his throat and began his examination.

"We have made a thorough inspection of the premises and cannot find that anything outside of the front rooms has been tampered with. All the windows of the unused lower portion are nailed down and the shutters fastened from the inside. The burglar alarm is in perfect order and would have notified the station had anything been forced open. The locks on the doors have not been broken, and they are of an intricate Yale pattern that could not have been picked. Everything goes to show that whoever entered did so by means of a key to the front door, since the rear door was bolted from the inside. If he did not unlock the front door it must have been left open, or else he was secreted in the house beforehand." He turned to Mrs. Tebbets. "Are you sure that everything was locked up last night when you retired and that no outsider was secreted anywhere?" She burst forth eagerly.

"And indeed I am, sir. I was downstairs all the evening, and if the front door had been open by so much as a crack I would have known it. I always notice such things. And there was not anybody in the house besides Mr. Halliday and myself, either. I swept the whole place yesterday afternoon, closets and all. If anybody had been under the beds my broom would have found him quick enough, the rogue." Noting these facts in his memorandum book the officer continued dogmatically:

"Then it comes down to this. Whoever did this must have done so by means of a key to the front door. The back door is still securely bolted from the inside, and your housekeeper says she has not had occasion to use it this morning. Therefore, it still remains as it was during the night. The lower windows are securely fastened; the upper ones could not have been raised sufficiently to admit a person without setting off the burglar alarm, and there are no other means of entrance. It could not have been done otherwise." There really seemed no fault with his reasoning thus far, and we all acquiesced by silent nods. He turned to us sharply.

"As I have said before, the door locks are of such a character that they could not have been picked or opened with a skeleton key. Now, who have keys to this place?"

My uncle gulped and placed his hand upon his swollen throat and I put myself in the breach. "If there is no objection I will answer for him. It will save his strength, and he and Mrs. Tebbets can listen and correct me or add anything whenever they choose."

Gruffly the policeman signified that it made no difference who spoke so long as all the facts were made known. One by one I answered his questions, watching him as he committed them to black and white with the painful effort of a schoolboy struggling with a composition. All three of us corresponded perfectly in our statements, Mrs. Tebbets merely adding that she had been awakened by a loud sound in the night, but thinking it was thunder, had gone to sleep again. That the noise was the explosion there seemed no room for doubt, and the policeman congratulated her that she had remained in bed, as the burglar undoubtedly was watching her room at the time. At the end of half an hour he thrust the memorandum book into his pocket and pursed up his lips. Then he arose with a vibration of his ponderous frame that sent the ashes which had accumulated in his lap in his combined effort to keep pen and cigar going at the same time, flying as water flies from the shakings of a wet mastiff.

"I will make another careful inspection of the premises inside and out and then put my men to work. I have a theory and you will hear from me later. I think the criminal will be in the clutches of the law very shortly. If you learn anything of importance, communicate it to me—Captain Donnell of the Twelfth precinct." Down the stairs they went, and from the window I watched them as they clumped around on the grass beneath in search of tell-tale clews. Perfumingly they passed around the house and then clambered into the wagon.

"If this matter is ever solved, I don't believe it will be by them," I mused as I recalled the stereotyped and formula-like questions of their leader. "There is too much intelligence back of it for them. They will shell the woods aimlessly in the faint hope of driving out somebody; cast the dragnet and bring in a score of habitual criminals whom they will question and then turn loose, after which they will resume the even tenor of their way along the trail of some other rogue. Of course they may stumble upon something that will give them a straight tip, but I don't believe it." I turned again to the bed where Uncle Abner was thrashing about like a fish out of water as he berated the thief without stint, and myself as liberally because I had not been at home to act as a buffer between the intruder and his wealth. It was exceedingly trying to me, and the housekeeper having straightened out his own bed, I was delighted to give him what assistance he needed to get into it. That done, I left him there in Mrs. Tebbets' care. Doctor Courtney still lingered, and I returned to my own apartments to discuss the peculiarities of the affair with him.

Perhaps half an hour had passed in this manner when the front door bell rang sharply, and as Mrs. Tebbets was in the midst of her own trouble with my uncle, I went below to answer it. Swinging the door open I saw on the step before me my old friend, William LeDuc, whom I had not seen in ages. Heartily I grasped him by the hand, and dragged him within.

AMUSEMENTS

"The Cowboy and the Lady" originally presented by Nat C. Goodwin and Maxine Elliott, which portrays an interesting story of western life, with scenes in Colorado, will be presented at the Murat, Indianapolis, next week. Teddy North, an eastern college man, has profited by the good advice to "go West and grow up with the country." He arrives in southern Colorado and buys a ranch, his eastern style, together with a hobby he has of changing his clothes each day, soon causes him to be termed by the cowboys as "the dude tenderfoot."

It does not take him long however to prove to them that he is the master of them all, both physically and mentally, and is soon recognized as their leader. He falls in love with a Mrs. Weston, whose husband, a rich ranchman, has the reputation of making love to every woman he meets; one of his affinities being the proprietress of a notorious dance hall, known as Molly Larkins. Molly for several years has been the sweetheart of a half breed Indian bearing the sobriquet of "Quickfoot Jim." The Indian finds Molly and Weston together and in a fit of jealous rage shoots Weston and makes his escape with no one discovering who committed the crime. As it is known that Mrs. Weston is in love with Teddy, and hates her husband, she is accused of the crime, and in order to save the woman he loves, Teddy swears that he is the guilty one. He is about to be lynched by the infuriated ranchmen, when the Indian confesses that he shot the ranchman. Teddy is liberated, and he and Mrs. Weston are now free to marry, so that all ends happily.

While the conception of the play is melodramatic, the plot is worked out in such a way as to make the story one of real heart interest. There is a vein of rich wholesome comedy intermingled with the thrills, that offers a laugh with every tear, and mingles comedy with tragedy in a manner that makes Clyde Fitch's story of the plains one of absorbing interest from beginning to end. "The Three of Us" will be the bill for the week of July 17.

CHORUS LADIES HAD HIS LETTERS

W. E. D. Stokes Tells About It On the Stand.

New York, July 8.—When W. E. D. Stokes finished testifying about the ingratitude of ladies of the chorus, Lawyer Moore, who represented the girls that shot holes in Mr. Stokes's legs, wanted to know who made away with the rest of the letters that Stokes wrote to Lillian Graham.

Stokes stated that he was quite sure he had written more, perhaps twice as many as had been introduced in evidence. He had been under the impression that Miss Graham had eighteen of his letters that she was willing to dicker for. But he did not know what had become of the missing epistles.

Moore insisted that at least nine letters had been hidden or destroyed. Magistrate Freschi could not see anything to be done, since there was no evidence that the documents had been made away with.

Then Moore took up the episode of Miss Graham's visit to Stokes's stock farm, Patchen Wilkes, near Lexington, Ky., a visit suggested in one of the letters admitted to the record.

The lawyer asked Stokes a direct question as to what relations he had had with Lillian Graham, but Magistrate Freschi wouldn't allow it, saying he wasn't there to try the woman's reputation. Then Assistant District Attorney Sullivan put a few questions on re-direct examination. Mr. Stokes said that he was anxious to regain possession of letters he had written to Miss Graham because he did not want his wife annoyed by receiving one of them every week as had been threatened.

The hearing will be closed today. Miss Conrad and Miss Graham will not be put on the witness stand. It seems pretty certain that Magistrate Freschi will hold them for the grand jury.

FISHING PERMITS ARE VIOLATED

Miles Hears Report of Bait Being Taken.

GAME FISH PUT ON HOOKS

Instead of Throwing Bass and Other Game Fish Back Into the Water, Seiners Carry Them Home—Wardens Are Investigating

Indianapolis, July 8.—Game Wardens Kelly and Landphere have gone to Shelby and Decatur counties to investigate the reports of violations of the game laws by persons to whom special seining permits were issued.

Fish and Game Commissioner Miles issued permits to seine to the people of several communities throughout central Indiana on condition that only undesirable fish would be taken from the streams. Recently he has received reports that the agreement is being disregarded, and instead of throwing bass back into the water the seining parties are taking them home.

In order to save appearances, it is said, some of the seiners carry hooks and lines and whenever a bass is caught in the net he is fastened to the hook, thrown back into the water and jerked out again.

In all cases where it is found the agreement has been violated in any particular the permits will be revoked. Commissioner Miles devised the plan of issuing special seining permits in the hope of ridding the streams of carp, suckers and other undesirable fish.

LARSEN WAS MURDERED

So Says Grand Jury, Disagreeing With Coroner.

Lafayette, Ind., July 8.—Petitions were filed with the commissioners of Benton county at Fowler, asking that $1,000 be appropriated to be offered as a reward for the detection of the person who murdered Peter Larsen, the aged Dane, who was found floating in a cistern in the rear of his home ten days ago, and whose death the grand jury decided was caused by some other hand than his own.

The grand jury in its report found that Larsen could not have inflicted the injuries that caused his death and that they must have been caused by another person. The report of the grand jury leaves the case a mystery, as the coroner found Larsen committed suicide.

During the last century this center has kept close to the thirty-ninth parallel."

JUDGE PURDY MAY BE A WITNESS

House Committee On Sugar Case Wants to Know

WHY HE DROPPED THE CASE

The Committee Is Curious to Know Just Exactly What Influences Were Brought to Bear That Changed the Attorney-General's Attitude.

Washington, July 8.—Judge M. D. Purdy, trust buster of the Roosevelt administration and now a district judge at Minneapolis, has been requested to appear before the house committee investigating the American Sugar Refining company and the sugar business generally. Judge Purdy was acting attorney-general in the interim during the promotion of Mr. Moody to the supreme court and the appointment of Mr. Bonaparte. Judge Purdy will be asked about statements made recently before the committee by G. H. Earle, receiver of the Real Estate trust company, of Philadelphia, that Earle laid before Judge Purdy, when the latter was attorney-general, evidence that showed that the failure of the trust company and the suicide of its president, and the closing of the Pennsylvania Sugar Refinery were the direct results of a conspiracy in violation of the anti-trust law for which the American Sugar Refining company's officials were responsible.

Mr. Earle said that when he gave this evidence to Attorney-General Purdy the latter exclaimed: "That is just the kind of a case the government wants. We will put the — in jail." Earle told the committee that Attorney-General Purdy afterward became lukewarm, and dropped the case. Attorney-General Bonaparte later refused to take up the matter, and advised President Roosevelt that there was no cause for action.

The committee wants to know the reason why Judge Purdy changed his mind, and what influences, if any, were brought to bear upon him.

PLUCKY AVIATOR

Atwood Made Three Attempts But Couldn't Get Started.

Atlantic City, July 8.—Aviator Atwood made three sensational starts yesterday in the resumption of his skyline journey from Boston to Washington. Disregarding the easterly gale that was whipping up a high surf, Atwood, accompanied by a passenger, took the air at 3:10. Before he got clear of the ground, his left propeller hit and killed a dog. The blade of the propeller was splintered, and Atwood was forced to descend.

Immediately he had made repairs he went up again, but the wind slewed one of his planes, and he came down a second time.

At 3:45 he made another rocket-like ascent. He was going up beautifully when a slant of wind caught the machine and swept it out toward the ocean. Seeing his danger, Atwood volplaned, and came down just within the edge of the surf. The life guards rushed out and pulled the two aviators and the monoplane up on the beach.

RUSHVILLE MEN WILL BE GUESTS

Local Merchants Receive Invitations to Attend Indianapolis Trade Association Buyers' Meet.

AT GRAND CIRCUIT RACES

Visiting Business Men Will be Entertained With Band Concert and Vaudeville.

The retail merchants here are receiving announcements of the mid-summer buyers meet to be held by the Indianapolis Trade Association next week. This event will be held at the time of the Grand Circuit races at the State fair grounds.

Many business men will find it convenient to visit the Capital city during the four days, July 11-14, and to combine business with pleasure. The races are the opening of the 1911 grand circuit, and this is the first season that Indianapolis has been included in the grand circuit. The race card each day is promised to be the highest class.

The buyer's meet was arranged by the Trade Association on the same days, in order that the visiting merchants might have time to visit the wholesale and manufacturing market of mornings and attend the races of the afternoons. In addition, the association has announced a special entertainment for the retail merchants on Wednesday night, July 12, at the German House, one of the finest club houses in Indianapolis. A band concert and vaudeville entertainment will be given in the commodious garden of the club, at the corner of Jersey street and Massachusetts avenue. The various manufacturing concerns, the wholesale houses and banks holding membership in the Trade Association, will issue tickets to the entertainment to their customers.

MORE ICE NOW.

New Castle Courier: Relief came for the ice famine Friday in a car load of ice, received at the Loer plant from Michigan City. The contents of the car were in a fairly good condition and temporarily bridged the company over the perilous situation of the past several days. Several cars are expected here during the coming week.

ON SHELVES FOR WINTER RELISH

Cherry Crop is Picked, Canned and All Ready to Serve During Cold Weather.

SEASON IS PROFITABLE ONE

The harvesting of the cherry crop is all but completed. The last red cherries are being picked, put in the cans and set back on the shelf to be relished on the cold days of next winter.

The fruit was so abundant that many gallons were picked by hand-fuls and the quality, both as to size and flavor, is believed to have been as remarkable as the yield. Much of the labor of seeding cherries has been removed in recent years by mechanical devices which do this work better than hands could do it. As cherries are a fruit which keeps well in cans the greater part of the large crop just gathered is now put away safely in glass and rests somewhere on the shelves of cellars or cupboards. How many quarts, or bushels, or tons of the fruit is thus put by for use on a future day no one could even guess.

As the raspberry season is fully on and the blackberry season is beginning, there is still much work to be done in the canning line, and these crops, though not so bountiful as the cherries, promise to be very good indeed. Dealers say the demand for cans of every variety has been extraordinarily heavy this season, and is still so in view of the blackberry harvest, which has only started.

PAINTS COURT HOUSE DIAL

John Innis Starts Work on Daring Feat.

The work of painting the west dial of the court house clock attracted the attention of people in the business district today and many marveled at the daring showed by the painter. The man was John Innis, veteran balloonist and painter. Innis did the work while suspended from the window above the clock, by means of a block and tackle. He worked at this height as though he were on the ground and of all the people Innis was the last concerned. Innis' work on the dial recalled to many the time when he climbed the flag pole, putting a new rope in place.

Farmers Take Notice

It is being reported we will not be able to take in wheat on account of the work that is being done on Third street. We wish to say that this is a mistake, as the street is not torn up in front of our mill yet, and even when they do get to work on it, we have made arrangements, so that we can take care of your trade as usual, so when you start moving your wheat, don't forget us, as we will appreciate your patronage, and assure you the very best of treatment.
